ABSTRACT

The document describes 31 reference resources which provide citations to materials within social services and training areas in a variety of media. The directory has been compiled to assist staff development coordinators and other social services training personnel as they develop library and computer research skills. For each reference, information is presented on subject, type of reference, type of material indexed, publisher, update frequency, price, and service offered. An example of an abstract, annotation, or citation is also presented for each entry. Reference resources include book indexes, computer data bases, library services, and journal article bibliographies. Most of the examples emphasize material on gerontology, although the data bases deal with a wide variety of social service topics. (DB)

The Continuing Education Project, School of Social Welfare, University at Albany, offers instructional programs for staff of state and local departments of social services and selected voluntary agencies. The project's target area for most programs is a 28-county region in northeastern New York; however, many programs are also conducted statewide. An integral part of the program is the development of instructional materials for use in project training activities and for staff development in local districts.

For the 1977-78 project year, training is conducted by five units: Adult Services, Income Maintenance/Medical Assistance, Child and Family Services, Planning and Needs Assessment, and Management and Staff Development. Instruction will be for 3,800 participants in 140 programs.

Project administrators and staff work in conjunction with training and program staff from the New York State Department of Social Services. Instructional materials, such as this publication, represent a product of this joint effort.

INFORMATION RESOURCES FOR SOCIAL SERVICES TRAINING

INTRODUCTION

An individual who is involved in training or teaching must first possess adequate research skills in order to gather the materials and information to be disseminated. Over the past few years, the methods used in conducting research have changed dramatically. What once might have taken days to research by looking through the Reader's Guide or card catalogs can now be done in seconds or minutes via computer. Although book indexes are still the most widely used form of reference, they now tend to emphasize current literature pertaining to more specific, as opposed to general, topical areas. Information Resources for Social Services Training has been developed to assist Staff Development Coordinators or other training personnel within the Department of Social Services in developing library research skills.

This publication, which contains 31 reference resources, such as book indexes, computer data bases, and library services, is intended as a supplement to Basic Adult Services: A Model Curriculum. Although annotated bibliographies for books and periodicals, supplementary reading lists, and audiovisual aids are given in the Model Curriculum, it still may be necessary for the trainer to collect additional information, possibly on a topic not covered in the curriculum. Thus, the reference resources contained in this booklet will provide citations to materials within the social services and training areas in a variety of media. This booklet contains what the author feels to be the best basic reference resources that are widely available.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR USE

Each reference is comprised of several parts. These parts are described below.

SUBJECT: Describes the type of content that is contained in the resource. This content can either be rather specific (e.g., gerontology) or very general (e.g., social services).

TYPE OF REFERENCE: Can be a citation, annotation, or abstract. A citation provides minimal information, such as author, title, and date. An annotation provides a citation plus a short description of content. An abstract, the most complete type of reference, contains the citation and a more thorough description of content.

TYPE OF MATERIAL INDEXED: Indicates the form(s) in which the referenced materials can be found (e.g., newspaper article, audiovisual, monograph, book).

PUBLISHER: Can be either a private company or a public, nonprofit organization.

UPDATE FREQUENCY: Indicates the currentness of the type of reference. It is important to know the update frequency so that efforts are not duplicated by researching a resource that has not been updated since a previous search. Also, references that are updated more frequently are more current.

PRICE: Lists the cost for using the reference resource. Computer data base searches may involve a charge, while hard copy (book) indexes usually do not.

DESCRIPTION: Provides an overview of the resource.

EXAMPLE: Gives an actual example; contains subject headings, citations, annotations, or abstracts. All examples are related to the topic of aging. Examples are provided in full-length form, exactly as they are found in the resource.

CONCLUSION

This publication is intended to be used as a reference work. Although it is helpful to review the entire publication to get a feel for the type of material it contains, it is not necessary to read the entire booklet at one time, but rather, to consult it as the need arises. The resources included in this publication emphasize material in gerontology.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC INDEX
A CUMULATIVE BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BIBLIOGRAPHIES

SUBJECT: General

TYPE OF REFERENCE: Citation

TYPE OF MATERIAL INDEXED: Journal article bibliographies

PUBLISHER: H. W. Wilson Company, New York

UPDATE FREQUENCY: Triannually; Cumulated annually

PRICE: Free

DESCRIPTION: The Bibliographic Index is a bibliography of bibliographies. The arrangement is by subject, and the bibliographies are usually no more than six months to a year old. This source is general and should be used for beginning a search. Bibliographies from 1900 periodicals are selectively included. This source provides bibliographic references, not actual bibliographies.

EXAMPLE: AGING — SUBJECT HEADING

TYPE OF REFERENCE: Abstract

TYPE OF MATERIAL INDEXED: Congressional documents

PUBLISHER: Congressional Information Service, Washington, D.C.

UPDATE FREQUENCY: Hard copy - Monthly; Cumulated quarterly, annually, every five years;
Computer data base - Monthly

PRICE: Hard copy - Free
Computer data base - Per number of printout pages and/or connect time

DESCRIPTION: The CTS/Index provides abstracts of materials issued by the U.S. Congress within the previous monthly period. To make the abstracts easily accessible, they are indexed within the source under a variety of headings; e.g., congressmen, authors. This source is comprehensive, current, and easy to use. The Index section and Abstract section are in two separate parts. Abstracts are arranged by entry number, which is provided in the Index citation. This index is available for computer data base searching with coverage from January 1970 to the present.

Weakness of early social work education programs in gerontology and determinants of social workers' ambivalence are analyzed and a new curriculum framework is proposed that would be sensitive to intergenerational transactions and quality-of-life factors. It would be community-based and focus attention on the middle years. (Editor/JT)

AGE & Aged Persons — SUBJECT HEADING
Bias in govt programs rptd 1-10, 14C1 — CITATION

MAIN ENTRY SECTION

C Age Bias Found in Government Programs. — ABSTRACT
The federal government's mental health, vocational rehabilitation and food stamp programs discriminated against children and the elderly, the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights asserted Jan. 10. The commission's 15-month study of 10 federal programs found that many individuals, particularly those over 65, were being denied access to social services and benefits "because of their age."

D As an example of the problem, the commission cited experts' testimony that persons over age 65 had more mental health problems than any other age group. Yet in 1975 they represented only 4% of the patients served at 328 community mental health centers funded by the government. Further testimony indicated the reluctance of mental health personnel to treat the aged was based on the feeling that they had "had their chance" and on therapists' own fears of aging.

E Program administrators offered the argument that the young provided a better return on the government's investment. However, children under 15 were also "seriously underrepresented" at those facilities, according to the study.

In the government's Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) program, administrators were found to be placing emphasis on persons f considered "employable"--those between the ages of 22 and 44.

Congress had ordered the Civil Rights Commission study after it passed the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, which banned "unreasonable" age discrimination in federally funded programs. To allow the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to incorporate the commission's findings into regulations against age bias, Congress had delayed the effective date of the act until Jan. 1, 1979.

ABSTRACT

AB INAPPROPRIATE HOSPITALIZATION OF ELDERLY PERSONS IN MENTAL INSTITUTIONS HAS BEEN A CAUSE FOR MUCH CONCERN. REDUCTION OF THIS TYPE OF HOSPITALIZATION HAS BECOME AN ACCEPTED NATIONAL POLICY. THE OBSERVED VARIATIONS AMONG THE STATES IN THE RATES AND TRENDS OF HOSPITALIZATION OF AGED PATIENTS MAY INDICATE THAT TRENDS IN SOME STATES ARE MORE CONGRUENT WITH NATIONAL POLICY THAN THOSE IN OTHERS. IN AN EFFORT TO ACCOUNT FOR THE WIDE VARIATION AMONG THE STATES, TIME TREND ANALYSES OF RATE CHANGES OF HOSPITALIZED AGED WERE MADE FOR A SAMPLE OF STATES. THESE REVEAL THAT THERE ARE RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN IMPATIENT TRENDS AND SPECIFIC POLICIES AND PROGRAMS FOR THE AGED. THE RESULTS PROVIDE INSIGHTS INTO MENTAL HOSPITALIZATION OF ELDERLY PERSONS, AND INDICATE HOW THE INAPPROPRIATE MENTAL HOSPITALIZATION OF THE AGED CAN BE REDUCED. AUTHOR.

TITLE: Foster homes for older adults: an attitudinal study.
SOURCE: Gerontologist.
SOURCEID: 15(5): 94, 1975.

ABSTRACT

In a paper presented at the 28th annual meeting of the Gerontological Society, Louisville, Kentucky, October 1975, factors indicating a family's willingness to serve as a foster home for aging adults are discussed. It was hypothesized that low income families would be more willing to serve as a foster home. A survey of 225 randomly selected homes in Seattle, Washington, revealed that although almost all homes felt that foster homes were a good to excellent idea, only 9% indicated a willingness to serve as a foster home sponsor. The income bracket $8,000 to $12,000 was most highly associated with willingness, while race was not shown to have a significant relationship. Additional factors shown to be significant were: 1) respondent's attitude towards potential client problems (i.e., mental and physical impairment, alcoholism, blindness, and limited mobility); and 2) the projection by the respondent of the type of care they would desire if it became necessary. It is concluded that recruitment techniques should vary according to demographic factors and attitudes within census tract areas. (Author abstract modified)

AB THE REPORT EXAMINED THE TRIP-MAKING BEHAVIOR OF PERSONS OVER 65 YEARS OF AGE RESIDING IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY, CALIFORNIA. THE TWO TYPES OF ELDERLY LIFESTYLES THAT WERE STUDIED WERE THOSE LIVING IN THE INNER-CITY AND THOSE LOCATED AROUND THE URBAN FRINGE. FOUR AREAS WITHIN THE COUNTY WERE SELECTED THAT REFLECT THESE TWO LIVING PATTERNS. A COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS OF TRIP PATTERNS AND SOCIOECONOMIC DATA WAS COMPLETE. IN ADDITION TO INVESTIGATING TRAVEL PATTERNS, A SURVEY OF TAXICAB USE ON WEEKENDS AND WEEKDAYS WAS UNDERTAKEN. THE ELDERLY REPRESENT A SUBSTANTIAL PROPORTION OF TAXICAB PATRONS. THEIR USE OF TAXIS IS FURTHER INDICATIVE OF THE CHANGES WHICH OCCUR IN MOBILITY PATTERNS UPON REACHING RETIREMENT. THIS MODE OF TRANSPORTATION IS PRESENTLY THE ONLY TYPE OF DEMAND-RESPONSIVE SERVICE AVAILABLE TO THE SENIOR POPULATION IN SOME PARTS OF THE COUNTY. Abstract: The report covers in detail an economical, effective foster family placement procedure for disabled adults. The relative effectiveness and the monetary savings of placing indigent clients in foster homes are compared. To facilitate the establishment of new placement centers, extensive training materials have been developed, which include video and audio tapes, a documentary film, a training book, and a bibliography with summaries. DESCRIPTION: Psychological Abstracts provides nonevaluative summaries of the world's literature in psychology and related disciplines. Over 950 journals, technical reports, monographs and other scientific documents provide material for coverage. About 30% of the records published are bibliographic citations or annotations which are used to cover books, secondary sources, articles peripherally relevant to psychology, or articles that can be represented adequately in approximately 30 to 50 words. Records published since 1967 are now on machine readable tapes that provide the basis for automated search and retrieval services known as Psychological Abstracts Information Service (PsycINFO). This bibliography begins with a critique of the state of research in Black, Mexican American, Native American, and Chinese and Japanese American gerontology. For Blacks, research is needed to answer the following questions: (1) What are the problems of Black aged being helped by white personnel in institutional settings? (2) What African cultural patterns, attitudes, values, and traditions may persist in such areas as Black attitudes toward the aged and aging and the role and place of the aged in the Black community? (3) What has been the impact of Black activist movements on the perceptions and actions of the aged, and on the attitudes of young Blacks toward the aged? Several areas of investigation concerning the Mexican American aged need research: (1) The role of the Mexican American extended family and their form of folk Catholicism; (2) The goodness of the "barrio" as a social environment for the aged; and (3) Means of establishing Mexican American co-operatives and/or agencies to help the aged. Native Americans would be helped by gerontological research as it has been traditionally done more than by social gerontological research. Research is also needed on rehabilitation methods for the aged alcoholic and on culture-specific patterns of aging, attitudes towards aging and the aged, and the social positions of the aged. Basic research of both the Chinese and Japanese aged is needed. (Author/JM)

Virginia Tech, Blacksburg, Va.

Project V-STRAP (Virginia Senior Training Results in Aging Power) was instituted to train aging persons to become aware of the needs of and resources available to senior citizens within the community and to motivate the same individuals to become actively involved in community affairs. — ABSTRACT

Three 1 1/2-day training workshops were held; the 151 participants were predominantly female, white, and retired and had held professional or semiprofessional positions. To evaluate the workshops, three instruments were used: a pretest/posttest instrument designed to measure cognitive learning, a workshop-satisfaction survey, and an interview schedule that was utilized six months after the training. It was found that a significant amount of learning had taken place, even though 57 percent could not report that any changes had occurred in themselves in terms of skills and techniques learned. Increased willingness to work for the aged was reported by 59.4 percent. Responses to the key question--whether participants had become more active in community activities concerned with the elderly after the conclusion of the workshop--revealed that 50 percent had.

ABSTRACT

The literature regarding the informal social participation patterns of the aged is reviewed, emphasizing the factors associated with degree of interaction with friends. The relationship between morale & friendship patterns emerges as a topic of considerable concern. Theorized as affecting social participation are: (1) disengagement, (2) status similarity, & (3) role loss. The disengagement theory implies that mutual decreased interaction between the aging person & others in his particular social system is inevitable. After analyzing several research studies on the subject, it is suggested that "subjective feelings regarding a meaningful life are not always associated with actual participation in social interaction." In the status similarity theory, variations in the concentration of age peers & relative levels of income are recognized as producing different outcomes for individual behavior patterns. Key events affecting the social participation of old people are widowhood & retirement, & both are found to be related to low morale in varying degrees. Formal as well as informal levels of social integration are recognized. They should be considered in development of social welfare programs & policy.
